Biography

I have been a safety consultant for over forty years. Working primarily in the insurance industry and concentrating on employee and third party safety. Currently, I am an independent contractor of safety services.

I have been fortunate to have managed teams to successfully assist organizations in reducing employee injuries and minimizing risk within their operations. I have been part of groups which have developed safety tools which are currently in use across the USA. Finally, I have consulted with companies in a variety of industries assisting these companies in understanding the levels of risk, evaluating alternative solutions, and developing programs to minimize the potential for injury.

I graduated with an electrical engineering degree from Vanderbilt University but migrated to the safety profession within two years of graduation. I have served on various boards for nonprofit organizations.
