IHMM Launches School Safety Credential

There are few things in our society more in need of and deserving of safety and security, our students, schools, and those who work there are at the top of the list.

Rockville, Maryland. (May 26, 2023) - IHMM is pleased to announce the launch of its Certified School Safety Manager® [CSSM®] credential, a certification of the school safety professional who is responsible for overseeing and supporting key operational and safety functions in educational facilities. The Certified School Safety Manager ensures that educational institutions have a certified professional in their institution whose focus is the security and safety of the institution and everyone who works and goes to school there.

IHMM Executive Director Gene Guilford said, “Professionals can certify their careers in school safety management and the tremendous responsibilities that go with making our campuses and educational facilities safe for students, instructors, and visitors alike. Given the constant threats focused on K-12 and institutions of higher learning, having a certified school safety manager as part of the safety regime of any educational institution is more important than ever.”
